What is IDP?

IDP is a process you direct, in partnership with your manager, to enhance your professional growth by:

What is IDP?

- Identifying and pursuing your personal goals for professional development
- Setting goals to learn or improve in important competencies you will need now or in the future
- Identifying your strengths, talents and passions and planning ways to use them on the job

- As a part of your IDP, you will identify the professional goals that matter to you, determine what experiences, skills and behaviors will help you achieve those goals and then create a plan of action to achieve your goals.
- You will work with your manager to evaluate areas that have the greatest potential to pay off for you, and for the organization, in the short term and longer term.

What is IDP?

This booklet explains your role in creating and directing your professional development and provides you with tools to create and launch your Individual Development Plan.

Getting Started To IDP Process

A STEP by STEP Guide to the IDP Process – Flow of Activity

Getting Started:

A STEP by STEP Guide to the IDP Process – Drafting Your IDP

Getting Started:

CAREER ASPIRATION - Your Career Goals and Motivations

1

- What motivates and energizes you at work?
- What kinds of opportunities do you want in the future?
- What opportunities exist in your current role that will help you develop and grow?
- Where do your motivations and the needs of the organization strongly align?
- What do you want to learn...prepare for?
- Note your goals and motivations on the Career Conversation Tool \(refer Doc 1\)

Determine your STRENGTH/TALENT and AREA OF DEVELOPMENT

2

- What are your talents/strengths?
- What are your passions, what do you love doing?
- What are your areas to improve, or new areas to learn?
- Review your recent and past performance-related feedback you have received from your supervisor(s), co-workers, clients and others, and any self-assessments you have taken - are they consistent with your assessment of your talents, strengths & development needs?
- Note your talents/strengths and development opportunities on the Career Conversation Tool \(refer Doc 1\)

A STEP by STEP Guide to the IDP Process - Drafting Your IDP

Getting Started:

ACTION PLAN – Chart Your Focused IDP Objectives, and Action Steps

3

- Considering your current career situation and future aspirations, where should you focus your development? What will your objectives be for this IDP?
- Will your IDP include building capabilities, preparing for new opportunities, both?
- Which of your strengths/talents will you use more often, or expand?
- What development opportunities are important for you to focus on?
- What S.M.A.R.TX2 action steps will you take to achieve your IDP?
- Note your ideas for development activities on the Conversation Tool (refer Doc 1)

MOBILITY- Determine your mobility flexibility

4

- In seeking for new opportunities, are you willing to move around?
- Functionally or Geographically, mobility will broaden & heighten your career growth.
- What are the constraints that limits you from embarking on new experience?
- When will you be ready to be mobile?
- Note your mobility readiness on the Conversation Tool (refer Doc 1)

A STEP by STEP Guide to the IDP Process – Discuss Your IDP & Formalize it

Getting Started:

CAREER CONVERSATION - Meet With Your Manager

- Schedule a meeting with your manager to discuss your draft IDP.
- You will be responsible for running the meeting with your manager.
- Prepare by reading through the “Meet With Your Manager” section of this guide.
- Bring the notes you created in Step 3 to the meeting.
- Use the “How to Conduct a Career Conversation Meeting With Your Manager” steps to run the meeting. \(refer Career Conversation\)
- Meet with your manager to discuss and refine your individual development plan.

ACTION – Execute your action item

- Based on your Career Conversation meeting, complete the IDP form (via ERA)
- and submit to your manager for acknowledgement.
- Plan your IDP deadlines into your calendar.
- Partner with your manager to make the plan work.
- Schedule quarterly follow up meetings to check on your progress.
- Act on the plan and assume ownership. \(refer Doc 2\)

Career Conversation

What are the things that come to mind when you hear “career conversation?”

Career
Conversation

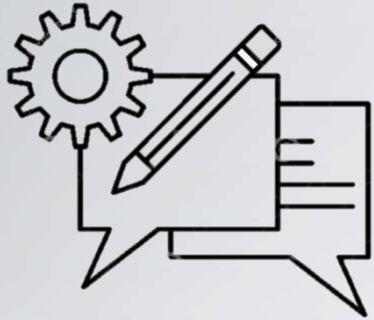

A conversation between an employee and a supervisor that focuses on understanding the employee's future career goals and discussing opportunities to gain the skills and experiences that will help them meet those goals

Career Conversation ≠ Performance Evaluation
Career Conversation ≠ Purely Coaching Discussion

Meeting With Your Manager

Career
Conversation

Individual Development Planning is a partnership, a joint effort, led by the employee and supported by the manager. The plan begins to come alive during the Career Conversation. In this meeting the employee and manager discuss and refine the ideas they have prepared before the meeting, and talk about development within the current job, and possibilities for future career development.

The output from the discussion is a refined IDP with goals and activities spelled out that will allow the employee to grow in directions of interest, while contributing to the needs of the organization. Together, the employee and manager create a plan the employee can act on and the manager can support.

Employee ROLE

Career Conversation

Prepare for the meeting

- Review your most recent performance appraisal and goals for this year. Think about what skills are needed for your current work and future positions, along with your interests and TM/Your Division's needs.
- Make notes in the Employee sections of the IDP Conversation Tool, and bring it to your meeting.
- Prepare to lead the discussion – this is your development plan.
- Use the meeting steps in the next section to plan and stay on track during the meeting.

Meet

- Your role is to provide an overview of your thoughts for each section of the Career Conversation Tool, and share how you arrived at your ideas.
- Invite your manager to share his or her perspective as you move through each section and come to agreement about what will be incorporated into the plan.
- Set a time to get the refined IDP back to your manager and calendar a time for your first check-in.

Manager ROLE

Career Conversation

Prepare for the meeting

- Review the employee's most recent performance appraisal and goals.
- Think about resources and opportunities that might provide development for your employee.
- Think about how your employee's talents and strengths can be best utilized.
- Make notes in the Manager sections on the Career Conversation Tool and bring your ideas to the meeting.
- Your employee will use the meeting steps in the next section to walk you through theirs

Meet

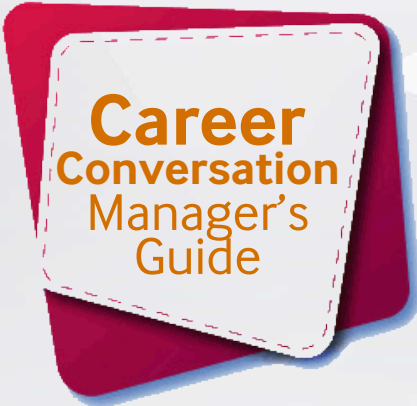

- Your role is to help the employee think through the plan based on what you know about the department's direction and goals, the company's goals and the employee's skills.
- Make sure you're clear about what will be included in the refined IDP, and how you will support it.
- Calendar the first check-in when your employee will meet with you to check progress.

How to Conduct a Career Conversation Meeting with Your Manager

Career
Conversation

- State the purpose and process for IDP discussion. “I would like to talk about ideas for my development and get your feedback so that we can agree on some next steps.”
- Give your manager an overview of each of the sections of the IDP form and share how you arrived at your conclusions for each.
- Ask and Listen – Invite your manager to share his or her perspective on each of the sections as you move through them, and listen carefully to understand his or her perspective and reactions.
- Decide with your manager which ideas to incorporate into your plan, and agree when you will send him or her the finalized IDP form.
- Thank your manager for his or her support and set a time during the next quarter when you will meet to check-in on progress.

Career Conversation Manager's Guide

Career Conversations Talking Points

Prepare to discuss the following topics during career conversations with your team member.

For the Manager: Careers Conversations Talking Points
Action Items	Talking Points
Review Employee Career Goals	Ask about your team member’s future career goals and see what parts of their future role they like best and why. Recognize that their desired future role could be on a different team or outside the organization.
Track Progress Towards Goals	Discuss progress towards your team member’s goals and determine which development opportunities they still need to pursue.
Identify Development Gaps	Brainstorm key development areas your team member will need to address to be successful in their next role. Be clear about what employees need to do to demonstrate they are ready for it. Encourage them to get outside perspectives to identify gaps if their desired role is outside their current team or organization.
Set Development Targets	Focus on key experiences your team member can pursue inside the organization to support their career goals and set specific timelines for tracking progress.
Communicate How You Can Provide Support	Communicate how you will help support your team member’s career goals. For example, offer to make their schedule more flexible to attend trainings and schedule regular conversations to discuss their progression.
Connect Your Team Member to Others	Connect your team member with others the team and organization to help them learn more about the requirements of their desired future role and how to prepare for it.

Career Conversation Guides

- Familiarize yourself with the employee's role(s), projects/assignments, and skills.
- Research future technical/skill/role needs for your organization and customer(s).
- Consider feedback that the employee has received during the year, and review year-end assessments to identify possible development areas.
- Consider roles, on-the-job learning opportunities, and training.
- Consider the following career conversation sample questions and add your own for each of the four components of the conversation. Keep in mind the different roles and types of employees that you're conducting career conversations with.

Review Employee Strengths and Preferences

- In your past work experiences, what roles, project work, and environment did you enjoy? What would you prefer not to do again?
- What do you wish you could do more of?
- What have you enjoyed the most in your past jobs?
- What are you most interested in learning?
- What tasks get pushed to the bottom of your "to do" list?

Consider the Business Environment

- In what work settings do you do your best work?
- What settings are challenging for you?
- What strengths do you bring to a project/assignment?
- Which ones have the most impact?
- What skills do you use at work that you'd like to improve?

Explore the Future

- If you could create your ideal job, what would it involve?
- What strengths and skills do you want to leverage?
- Is there a specific technical, functional, or customer domain area where you'd like to gain knowledge or experience?
- Are there skills you're interested in developing?
- What are they, and why?

Discuss Next Steps

- How frequently would you like to have this type of conversation in the future?
- When should we have a follow up discussion to make sure we are making progress toward your development goals?

- Actively Listen — you should be talking only 10%-20% of the time.
- Ask open — ended questions to ensure you fully understand what your employee is saying.
- Be supportive. Show that you're genuinely interested in learning about them.
- It's OK to not have all the answers. Be honest and explain that you don't know, and offer to research the answer or point them elsewhere for information.
- Pause after you ask a question and listen. Silence gives your employee time to process your question and think about a response.
- If you're unclear, repeat what you think you heard to find out if you got it right:
"I think you said that you enjoy doing _____, is that correct?"
- Approach the dialogue with an open mind and have a supportive, positive outlook. Be mindful of your biases.
- Be careful not to go into "solution mode" before your employee is done discussing his or her career aspirations. Take time to fully understand what the employee wants to do.

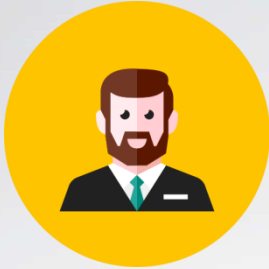

Employee Role

- Send your supervisor a copy of the finalized plan.
- Act on the plan. Implement the plan – this is your career, your future and only you can take the steps required to develop and grow your skills and capabilities.
- Hold to your scheduled meetings with your manager to track progress and make adjustments as necessary.

Act
On Your Action Plan

Follow Up On the Plan

Manager Role

- Help your employee secure resources or opportunities to accomplish their goals (training, new assignments, people to contact).
- Check-in informally on a regular basis to find out how much progress has been made.
- Hold to your scheduled meetings with your employee to track progress and coach as necessary.

That's all ! To learn more, you have to start doing

Potential Development Activities

Most people learn most effectively, and long-lastingly by doing. Research tells us that activities most likely to be effective to develop people have many of these qualities:

1. They target building on strengths, or developing skills, that have been selected based on accurate self-assessment combined with candid feedback from as wide a range of sources and relevant perspectives as possible.
2. They provide an opportunity to engage in real work activities that are challenging, visible and have some risk, but also have support to allow for acceptance of mistakes as skills and competencies are learned.
3. They are not limited to one or two types of “good” development activities, but can be drawn from a variety of types of activities – as long as they do not target too many different skills or abilities at once, and are practical and doable.
4. They resonate with the individual who owns the IDP, so the individual knows these are the right areas to target, and genuinely cares about developing them.

Working or work related activities do not generally offer development in only one or another skill or competency areas. This means you will bring your focus area to the activity to make sure you use it well to provide the growth you are looking for.

For example, skills of organizing a group, speaking effectively and motivationally, engaging diverse individuals in an activity, problem solving, innovating, etc., could all be potential target areas within some of the activities below. Different people will use these activities differently to target the areas that matter to them.

On the next page is a “Short List” (not by any means all inclusive) of activities that can be used to target specific competencies for development.

1. Present at or lead a meeting(s) you do not normally run.
2. Take on a significant role for a task/project/activity that crosses departmental boundaries.
3. Put yourself in someone else's shoes (shadow, or job swap for a predetermined time).
4. Mentor someone in the organization.
5. Volunteer, and take a lead role.
6. Join a professional organization, and sign up for a committee of interest, or role on the board.
7. Network to meet at least 6 new people at TM
8. Do an information interview(s) with someone(s) whose role interests you, and discuss what you learned with your manager.
9. Serve as coordinator of a search/interviewing team for a position your group is looking to hire into, and fulfill the role of key liaison with HR for this position opening.
10. Build a business case for a change in your department, and present it to your manager.
11. Sign up to take part in a TM community event or
12. Do research on a topic that interests you and is related to your department, or TM, and present your findings at a staff meeting, or to your manager.
13. Create a process map for a service you provide to your customer groups, and analyze it for potential improvements.
14. Form and lead a team to improve hand-offs between your department and one of your customer groups or departments.
15. Teach someone a skill or area of expertise you possess.
